The purpose of the first voyage in 1584 was only to discover the characteristics of the region. The men landed on the Outer Banks of present-day North Carolina and made mostly friendly contact there with the Native people. Two Natives returned to England with the men. Due to their positive report, Queen Elizabeth gave Raleigh a grant, a document of permission, to settle a new colony that would be called “Virginia,,: as she was known as “The Virgin Queen” because she was unmarried.
